

Click the play symbol above to watch on YouTube
published 21 April 2020

Korakrit Arunanondchai: 'Being an artist is about inducing a sacred moment'

The elusive artist gets behind the camera for this video self-portrait

'I see all art as a form of storytelling,' says Korakrit Arunanondchai – and there are stories aplenty in the work of the Thai-born, US-based artist. Personal memories, obscure historical events, and animistic rituals are among his plethoric set of references. They inform a practice spanning from video to performance and crop up in visual feasts as intriguing as they are alluring. For the latest episode of 'Meet the Artists,' Art Basel asked Arunanondchai to turn the camera on himself – not as a performer but as a guide. He leads us through his fantastical artistic world.

Direction: Alex Gvojjic

Camera: Alex Gvojjic, Korakrit Arunanondchai, Shui, Op Sudasna, Rory Mulhere, Michael Cutrone and RJ Camacho

Sound: Aaron David Ross

Production: Coline Milliard and Jeanne-Salomé Rochat for Art Basel

Korakrit Arunanondchai is represented by Clearing, New York City, Brussels, and Carlos/Ishikawa, London.